

Countdown

Cindy Redondo, 4, doesn't seem quite so interested in the ballot tabulations for South Tucson's primary election as do the challengers for town council seats,

All But One S. Tucson Councilman Win In Primary Election; 70% Vote

All but one of South Tucson's town councilmen won a place on the general election ballot for May 24 as nearly 70 per cent of the town's eligible voters took part in the primary voting yesterday.

Incumbent councilman Ralph Toledo was nudged from the list in the Democratic primary, to be replaced on the general election ballot by Edward Trejo. Toledo polled 286 votes, Trejo 290.

Other incumbents winning ballot positions were Reynaldo Santa Cruz, vice mayor, 417 votes; Mrs. Julie Velez, 351; Jesus Q. Elias, 328; Mrs. Beatrice Morales, 335; Ernest M. Mejia, mayor, 291, and Raul Martinez, 288.

Dan Eckstrom, the only Republican on the ballot, received 37 votes.

Challengers who were unsuccessful in the primary were Wayne C. Goodman, 240 votes; Carlos Quintero, 211; Edwardo Redondo, 218; John A. Go-dal, 169, and Juan T. Aldama, 102.

Palma said 683 of the town's 993 registered voters cast ballots in the primary.

Voting in the May 24 general election will take place at the South Tucson Fire Station, 1810 S. 6th Ave.

a-day centers in Neighborhoods served by the Tucson Committee for Economic Opportunity — including the Model Cities area and the municipality of South Tucson. The grant is being sought from the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Eckles said that a "crisis intervention center" is being planned to refer narcotics addicts and drug abusers to treatment and counseling services.

He said that OEO money can be used to finance this program because its prime concern would be to "get people back into the job market."

"Gainful employment is one of the essential ingredients of a pad," where addicts could go to kick the habit.

Eckles said that, if the $25,000 grant is received, and "indications are good that it will be," the program will be presented to the South Tucson mayor and council for approval.

This grant would have to be matched by $63,500 in non-federal funds, which could be money "in kind" in the form of services or facilities used in the program, he said.

On Saturday, the coalition received a grant of $25,510 from the state's Justice Planning Agency for Eckles' salary and for office expenses.

BENJAMIN 'CHROMEDOME' PADDOCK

Ex-Tucsonian Makes FBI List Of 10 Most Wanted

By GILBERT T. MATTHEWS
Citizen Staff Writer

'Chromedome'

Known to his associates as "Chromedome," "Old Baldy," and "Big Daddy," Benjamin Hoskins Paddock is Tucson's contribution to the FBI's list of 10 most-wanted fugitives.

He made the list after escaping on Dec. 31, 1968, from the Federal Correctional Institution at La Tuna, Tex., where he was serving a 20-year sentence for robbing a Phoenix bank in 1960.

Paddock — alias Perry Archler, Benjamin J. Butler, Leo Genstein, Pat Paddock and Patrick Benjamin Paddock — hasn't been seen or heard from since.

At the time of the robbery, Paddock lived in Tucson with his wife and four children. Neighbors said they couldn't believe that the colorful businessman, then 34 years old, was involved in crime.

Paddock sold garbage disposal units here under the business name of Arizona Disposer

Although he was imprisoned for the $4,620 holdup of a branch of the Valley National Bank in Phoenix, Paddock also had been accused of two other bank robberies.

Those charges were dropped after his conviction.

Federal officers reported that when he was arrested in Las Vegas, Paddock attempted to run down an FBI agent with his car.

"Since he has utilized firearms in previous crimes, has employed violence in attempting to evade arrest and has been diagnosed as being psychopathic, Paddock should be considered extremely dangerous," said Palmer M. Baker Jr., agent in charge of the Phoenix FBI office.

Baker described Paddock as being "A glib, smooth-talking man who is egotistical and arrogant."

Justice Dept. Will Appeal Wiretap Decree In 'White Panther' Case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department announced today it will appeal to the Supreme Court ruling that it is illegal for the government to tap telephones of domestic groups in absence of a court warrant even in the interest of national security.

U.S. Solicitor General Erwin N. Griswold said a petition would be filed in the Supreme Court asking review of a 5th Circuit Court of Appeals' opinion, Cincinnati, in the case of a member of the so-called "White Panthers."

The 6th Circuit on April 8 upheld a decision of U.S. Dist. Judge Damon Keith in Detroit.

The petition to the Supreme Court will be filed later. The 6th circuit ruling, if allowed to prevail, was seen as possibly a major blow to the Justice Department's stepped-up use of wiretapping in surveillance of radical domestic groups.

In a 2-1 ruling, the Appeals Court ordered the Justice Department to disclose contents of telephone conversations wiretapped in its investigation of the bombing Sept. 29, 1968, of a Central Intelligence Agency office at Ann Arbor, Mich.

The case involves Lawrence "Pun" Plamondon, 25, one of three White Panthers accused of conspiracy in the bombing incident.

Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell

last Friday made a strong defense of wiretapping and surveillance, arguing in a speech that the greatest danger to the nation was from within. He staunchly defended what he felt was the government's right to wiretap purely domestic groups.

"National security is indivisible," Mitchell contended. "You cannot separate foreign from domestic threats to the government and say that we should meet one less decisively than the other."

"I don't see how we can separate the two, but if it were possible I would say that experience has shown greater danger from the so-called domestic variety."
